Authorities Say Video Shows Teenager in Ferguson Had Gun

(NY Times) St. Louis County police investigators released surveillance video on Tuesday that they say shows an 18-year-old man who was shot by their officers pulling a gun out of his waistband and pointing it as he ran toward the street late Sunday. The release of the video comes after protesters and the family of the youth, Tyrone Harris Jr., raised doubts about the police version of the events that left Mr. Harris critically injured after he was shot at by four plainclothes police detectives. After Mr. Harris raced across West Florissant Avenue in Ferguson, where demonstrators were commemorating the first anniversary of the death of Michael Brown, the authorities said, he began firing on an unmarked police vehicle whose lights were flashing. That led to a foot chase, the police said, which ended with Mr. Harris bloodied and facedown in a parking lot. The police approach a man lying in a parking lot with what appear to be gunshot wounds after a barrage of gunshots erupted near the main protest area in Ferguson, Mo. The video's release comes as an edgy calm took hold in the troubled city. The St. Louis County executive said that he would consider on Wednesday lifting the state of emergency that he declared this week.

China landslide buries dozens of mining workers

(Al Jazeera) Dozens of people have gone missing in China, after a landslide buried the living quarters of a mining company under one million cubic meters of earth, according to local authorities. The deluge shortly after midnight swallowed 15 employee dormitories and three residential houses in Shangluo, in the northern province of Shaanxi, the city government said in a statement on Wednesday. Around 40 people were missing, it said, adding that police, firefighters, mining rescuers and medical staff had been sent to the site and residents in the area evacuated. The mine's operator was identified by the official Xinhua news agency as Wuzhou mining company, which according to its parent company is mainly a vanadium producer. Separately, a coal and gas burst on Tuesday night in a mine in the southwestern province of Guizhou killed 10 people and left one more missing, provincial work safety authorities said in a statement. Rescue efforts were under way, the statement Wednesday said. China - the world's largest producer of coal - is grappling to improve standards in the sector, where regulations are often flouted and corruption enables bosses to pursue profits at the cost of worker safety. Accidents in Chinese coal mines killed 931 people last year, a top work safety official said in March.
